A photograph of four people (three young adults and one man) standing behind a large wooden sign at the Cape of Good Hope. The sign is made of dark wood with yellow lettering and is supported by green metal posts. The background features a rocky coastline, waves crashing against the shore, and a clear blue sky. The sign on the left is partially cut off. The sign in the middle contains coordinates. The sign on the right identifies the location as the Cape of Good Hope and the most south-western point of the African continent.
